

International Forestry Review

Subscription offer

The leading forestry journal

The International Forestry Review (IFR) is the leading peer-reviewed forestry journal covering international forestry research, policy and conservation.

The IFR is published quarterly and regularly has Special Issues that focus on major forestry issues (e.g. Africa – it's forests and their future; Illegal Logging; China – the newest forestry superpower).

Papers are reviewed by an international Editorial Board of acclaimed foresters.

Reduced subscription rates

The IFR is normally available to organisations for £250 / €375 / $375 but the IFR is collaborating with PERI (see below) to offer free online access to the journal to libraries and forest-related organisations.

How does it work?

Simply register your library at <http://www.inasp.info/scgi-bin/peri/peri.pl?pid=29> to gain free access to the IFR.

What is PERI?

PERI, the Programme for the Enhancement of Research Information, is one of a range of activities of INASP - the International Network for the Availability of Scientific Publications.

The Delivering Information component of the PERI programme delivers a wide range of electronic resources and to their key customers and stake-holders - library and information professionals, teaching staff, faculty members and professors, plus of course researchers, students and scholars. Read more at <http://www.inasp.info/peri/index.shtml>